

Prof Raffaele Badolato

Raffaele Badolato works as Professor of Pediatrics at the University of Brescia (Italy). He is a Pediatric immunologist with a special expertise in the field of Primary immunodeficiencies.

Education and training: Medical Degree Magna cum Laude in 1989 at University Federico II, Napoli; he has been resident in Pediatrics until 1993. He has been trained in Immunology research at National Cancer Institute (Frederick, USA) where he has conducted studies on the role of acute phase proteins and chemokines in inflammation from 1993 to 1995. He has received Fellowships from AIRC and Telethon and research grants from Telethon, Italian Health Ministry, EU 7th program and Italian, MIUR, and eRare. He is member of numerous Societies, including the European Society of Immunodeficiency, the Society of Leukocyte Biology, the Italian Society of Pediatrics, the Italian Society for Pediatric Research.

He is Chair of Frontiers of Pediatric Immunology, member of the Editorial board of Pediatric allergy and Immunology and serves as Reviewer for many Journals including New Journal of Medicine, Journal of Clinical Investigation, Blood, Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology, Pediatric Infectious Diseases Journal. He has Authored more than 100 papers on peer review Journals. He has given important contribution to the field of Primary immunodeficiencies by identification of novel diseases and providing evidence for the pathogenesis of other diseases such as WHIM syndrome and Hermansky-Pudlak syndromes.